A – The EHF Lecturer

1. Philosophy

Handball has recorded a steady and successful development over the last years. The game has become faster and more attractive. Tactics and rules have changed and the number of players, coaches and spectators increased.

Beach Handball, a new sport under the “umbrella” of the EHF has also undergone rapid development. This exciting and spectacular sport has established events in many countries (European Beach Handball Tour) with European Beach Handball Championships held for both men and women, and lately also for youth.

In general the pace of the handball development is linked to educational activities. The EHF CAN plays an important role by initiating and supervising educational services in all fields of the discipline (coaching, refereeing, Beach Handball, Mini-, School-, Basic Handball). To keep the pace of handball going, the knowledge about the discipline should be spread among the broadest possible circle of people as well as attract new and preferably young people to our sport.

For spreading new information, exchanging experience and know-how, teaching coaches, referees and players it is necessary to establish a group of experts on the European level.

The European Handball Federation (EHF) has always done its best to cooperate with Handball experts of different cultures and geographical regions who are able to present and share their knowledge and experience in National or European courses, seminars and publications in their function as EHF Lecturers in Handball and Beach Handball.

This manual comprises information on the functions, tasks and duties of an EHF Lecturer. Furthermore it comments on the history, and working fields of the EHF, which will help to identify the role of EHF Lecturers as “ambassadors” of the European Handball Federation.

2. Prerequisites

An EHF Lecturer shall have

- Handball or Beach Handball competence of the highest level
- Experience as a player, referee, delegate, coach, teacher, author of educational material and/or sport scientist
- Knowledge of English is obligatory

Furthermore he should also be able to share and present his knowledge and experience in a clear and professional way that is easy to understand and adequate to his target group.

Additionally he should be able to represent the European Handball Federation in his function as lecturer following the EHF philosophy and ideals. In the function as EHF Lecturer the European way of thinking has priority over National interests.

All EHF Lecturers shall be available and ready for accepting nominations for various tasks.

3. Nominations / Finances

The responsibility for the nomination of lecturers is with the Methods Commission, Competition Commission, Beach Handball Commission and/or the EHF Competence Academy & Network (EHF CAN), in close co-operation with the EHF office that is responsible for the administration and follow-up of lecturer nominations!
